

How to apply for a job as a preschool or kindergarten teacher in Australia

Early childhood teachers are responsible for planning literacy and math lessons and developing social skills through creative lessons such as arts, storytelling, and drama. Early childhood teachers must also ensure the health and safety of the young children, support personal hygiene, and observe, assess, and report on each child's progress. They supervise children in classroom and playground settings and provide positive solutions for conflict and discipline issues.

Furthermore, they need to record and report on the child's progress and an important aspect of their responsibilities is to communicate with parents.

There are 3 main steps you will need to take to apply for a preschool or kindergarten teacher position in Australia:

1: Complete a bachelor's degree or higher education.

Studying education at university level such as bachelor's degree is usually required if you want to become an early childhood teacher. Furthermore, you will need to choose a course on the ACECQA list of approved early childhood teaching qualifications. To become an early childhood teacher, you need higher education qualifications and ongoing professional development to adapt to changing sectors.

2: Registration

Registration is not required for early childhood teachers working in early childhood services, except for primary teachers with approved diploma level qualifications. If you want to work with children in Queensland, you need a blue card. This includes police checks.

3: Apply for a job

Jobs are usually advertised in newspapers and online job websites.

Skills that you need to consider when becoming an early childhood teacher:

Early childhood teachers need a natural affinity for their children and a deep desire to foster their growth. Patience and kindness are also necessary skills, as working with young children can be very difficult. An early childhood educator is responsible for the emotional well-being of the children, and it is important to nurture them to grow. Furthermore, early childhood teachers need to be well organized, follow policies and procedures, and be able to report on their learning programs and outcomes.
